Why Content Matters

- Prospective students who find you through organic search tend to be more engaged and have a higher likelihood of converting.
- High-performing organic content can reduce paid campaign costs by contributing to assisted conversions.
- Search-optimized content enhances your brand visibility.
- Establishing a strong organic footprint provides a long-term competitive edge, as it's harder and more time-consuming for rivals to replicate.
- Gaining insights into audience behavior and content engagement helps shape a more effective strategy for program landing pages, both for organic and paid channels.

AI Overview

Tennessee has several schools that offer Doctor of Business Administration (DBA) programs, including public and private schools:

- University of Tennessee-Knoxville
A public school that offers business administration doctoral degree programs.
- Bryan College
Offers a DBA program in Dayton, TN that can be completed in as little as three years. Students can transfer in 15 graduate business credits and take 45 additional credits in business classes.
- Trevecca
Requires applicants to have a graduate degree and 60 semester credits to graduate. Students without a business degree but with a master's degree in a non-business area may need to take five prerequisite credits, including two 6-week MBA courses.
- South College
Requires applicants to submit an application, official transcript, and evidence of a minimum 2.75 GPA in post-baccalaureate coursework. Applicants for certain concentrations may also need to provide evidence of at least three years of experience in the field.
- Lincoln Memorial University
Offers a DBA program through its School of Business.

A DBA can provide graduates with advanced skills in business that can help them in consultancy roles, starting their own businesses, or pursuing careers in academia. According to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, entry-level positions for people with a DBA degree typically start at around $58,085, but there's potential for growth to $208,000 or more annually.

AI Overview

To become an athletic trainer, you'll need to meet educational and certification requirements: ⓘ

Education

You'll need at least a bachelor's degree from an accredited athletic training program. Many employers prefer to hire athletic trainers with a master's degree. The curriculum includes courses in biology, anatomy, nutrition, sports medicine, and kinesiology. ⓘ

Certification

You'll need to pass the Board of Certification (BOC) exam. You can prepare for the exam by completing a certified program. After passing the exam, you'll need to complete continuing education units to maintain your certification. ⓘ

Licensing

Almost all states require athletic trainers to be licensed or certified to practice. Licensing requirements vary by state, but most require an accredited degree and passing the BOC exam. ⓘ

AI Overview

A Master of Science in Management (MSM) degree and a Master of Business Administration (MBA) degree are both business education programs that can prepare you for leadership roles. However, they differ in their focus, intended audience, and curriculum:

Focus

An MSM degree is better for those who want to pursue a managerial role, such as in logistics or people leadership. An MBA degree is better for those who want to improve their quantitative skills and prepare for an administrative role.

Intended audience

An MSM degree is often designed for recent college graduates or those with little to no industry experience. An MBA degree is often designed for business professionals who want to advance their careers and may require several years of related business experience.

Curriculum

An MSM degree focuses on topics like diversity, inclusion, and responsible leadership. An MBA degree focuses on topics like quantitative decision analysis, financial management, and information technology. MBA programs also typically have more electives than MSM programs.

Earning a Master of Business Administration (MBA) vs. a Masters in Management (MSM) Degree

The first Master of Business Administration (MBA) was introduced over a century ago, and while it has become the de-facto career enhancer for many professionals, the Master of Science in Management (MSM) started giving it competition in the early 2000s. Yet, in spite of name and curriculum similarities, the MBA and Masters in Management degrees address two distinct groups of business professionals and, in turn, deliver separate outcomes.

As you think about entering a new stage of your career, here are some of the key differences and similarities between the MBA and the Masters in Management.

Optimize Your Current Content

- Program pages
 - Are they created with the prospective student in mind?
 - Is the content robust and helpful for a student's search?
 - Does your program page directly address search queries?
 - How is the content structured?
- Blogs and resources
 - Is there a content strategy to create authority?
 - Are the articles properly structured?
 - Is the content helpful to answer complex questions?
 - Is the tone conversational?
- Don't forget the basics
 - SEO fundamentals still matter
 - Shift towards meaningful conversations vs keyword stuffing

Content For Every Stage

Consideration

As students move further down the funnel, they need more detailed information.

- Program comparison guide
- Offering
- Case study

Awareness

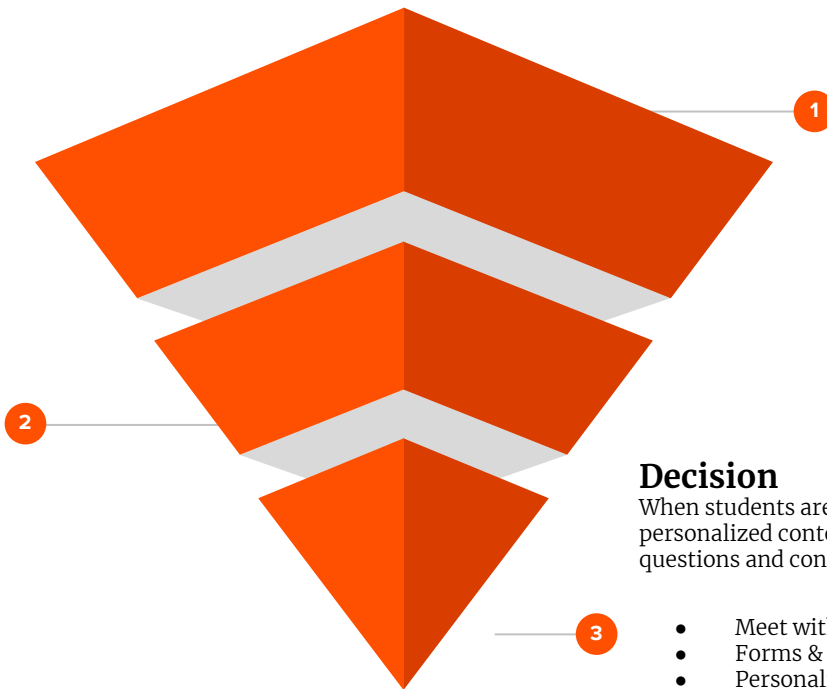

At this stage, students are just starting their research. Content that provide general information about your programs, campus life, and financial aid options are great.

- Blog
- Checklist
- Ebook
- Tip sheet
- Infographic

Decision

When students are ready to make a decision, personalized content that address their specific questions and concerns is key.

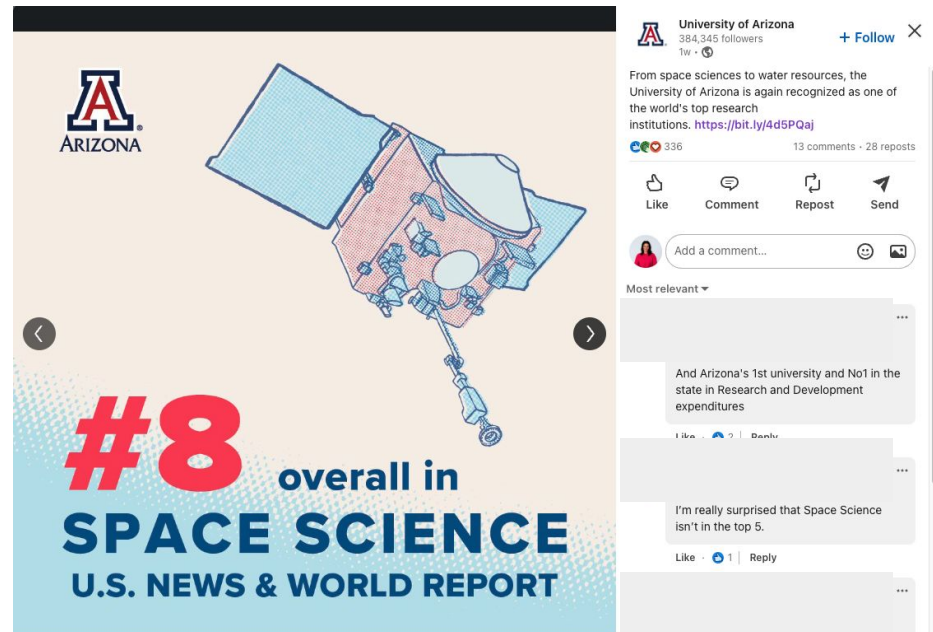

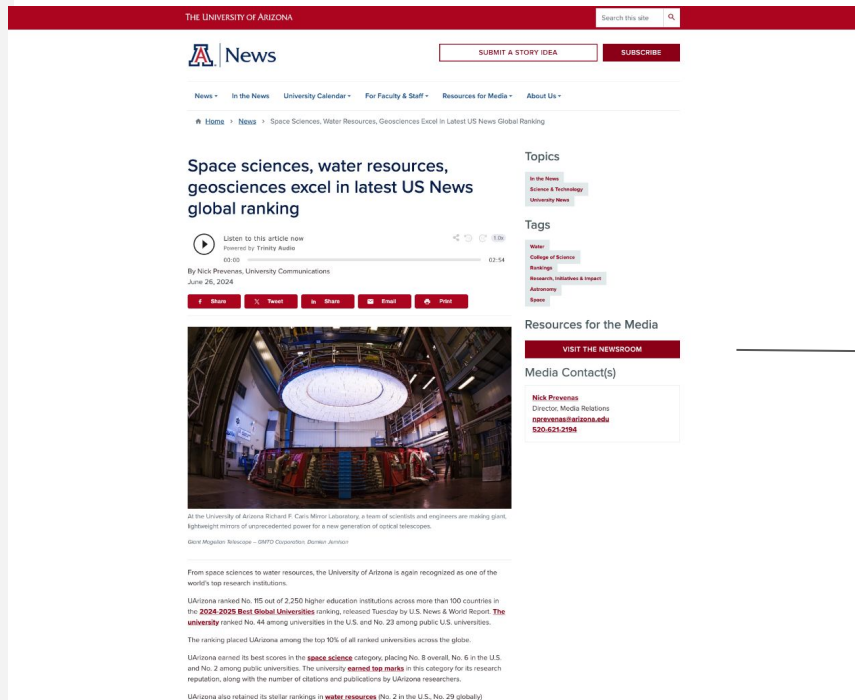

- Meet with an enrollment counselor
- Forms & landing pages
- Personalized emails

Leveraging Content Beyond Your Site

Repurposing your content can amplify your reach, diversify your audience, and reinforce your message.

Leveraging Content Beyond Your Site

1. Start with a comprehensive blog
2. Create an infographic for a more visual representation
3. Break down the infographic into bite sized posts for a social media series
4. Use tools like Lumen5 to create a video from that blog
5. Leverage blog into a more robust offering, like an ebook “The ROI of an MBA: Quantifying the Benefits”

Nurture to Conversion

Now you have content that draws in prospective students, now what? Use that content to nurture them down the funnel

Top of the Funnel: At this stage, students are just starting their research. Content like blogs, eBooks, and webinars that provide general information about your programs, campus life, and financial aid options are crucial.

Middle of the Funnel: As students move further down the funnel, they need more detailed information. Here, case studies, testimonials, and virtual tours can help them envision themselves at your institution.

Bottom of the Funnel: When students are ready to make a decision, personalized content becomes key. This could include one-on-one consultations, detailed application guides, or personalized emails that address their specific questions and concerns.
